Dedicated to helping improve patient care through advancing parental nutrition education around the world.

The International Conference for Advancing Nutrition (iCAN) is a global education program designed to deliver the most up-to-date information available on a wide range of relevant nutritional topics. The program curriculum was developed by a diverse panel of renowned international physicians with specific expertise in nutrition and is offered at no cost to a select number of health care professionals. The digital platform will allow participating HCPs to leave the program with a greater scientific and clinical understanding of parenteral nutrition applications along with useful nutritional strategies to help improve their patients' well-being.
